

MAKING DECISIONS - ACTIVITY

How do Uni preferences work?

When you apply for most courses, you can apply for up to 5-8 courses. It's important that you list courses in your order of preference. So, for example, the course list as your first preference should be the one you absolutely want to get into. Then the course you put down as your second preference is your next favourite course to get into, and so on.

If you're eligible for your first course preference then you'll receive an offer for that course. If you're not eligible for your first course preference then you'll be considered for the next in your list, and so on.

Ideally, fingers crossed, you'll be eligible for your first choice. Wouldn't that be awesome?

How to rank your Uni course preferences

When deciding on the order of your course preferences try

DREAM COURSES

These are the dream courses you would absolutely love to do and are hopeful of being offered a place. This would be your 1st, 2nd and 3rd preferences

PLAN B COURSES

These are backup courses you would be happy to do and are fairly confident of being offered a place. These would be your 4th, 5th and 6th preferences

PATHWAY COURSES

These are pathway courses that could allow you to upgrade to your preferred course. This would be your 7th and 8th preferences.

If you change your mind, don't worry, you can change preferences at any time.
